Forever Changed

He died suddenly, at Athol, April 30, Although but a boy on the memorable morning of the Lexington fight, April 19, upon receiving the news of the approach of the British troops, Regulars, and before light in the morning having assisted his father in carrying his mother with a young infant Solomon in her arms, in an arm chair, about a mile back from the scene of danger, he seized his father's musket and joined the citizens who braved the English troops on that day. Whether the pregnancy was planned or a surprise no longer makes a difference, as the only thing that now matters is the safety of one's little bundle of joy.
